A Living Classroom

All the students at the animal science classroom in Arlington, Virginia are learning how to take care of animals. You can find about 50 kinds of animals in the classroom.

With a cat in her arms, Betty says it is “so cute”. She loves it a lot. But Peter doesn’t feel the same way about Snickers. He is giving some hay(干草) to her. He wishes she can let him brush her. “She’s easy to get angry when you don’t look after her carefully. And she doesn’t like people to ride her.” he says.

Peter is one of seventy students who is learning in the animal science classroom. The students here can have classes and hands-on with the animals. They can get class credit(学分) and have time to learn what it is like to work with animals.

Ann is taking a rabbit for a walk, and she wants to give it some exercise. She takes the rabbit on a leash(皮带), like a dog. They have to walk past the rats, salamanders and even a hedgehog(刺猬) in the classroom. She says, “I want to learn more about different kinds of animals and get a hands-on experience.” Every day she has to do some cleaning for the animals. She wants to work for the animals as a volunteer in a few years.

A science teacher, Mrs. Smith explains(解释) that the students can learn “hand taming in the classroom”. They need to put their hands on the animals and feel them for about ten minutes. Yes, that includes(包含) snakes and even a kind of deadly(致命的) spider. Mrs. Smith says she likes showing the students how to do the hand taming.

Mrs. Black also helps the students and lives with the animals in the classroom. She says that, like people, animals have minds of their own. “They have their good days and their bad days. Different animals have different personalities(个性) and they like making friends with different people.”

 - B. Mrs. Black also learns hand taming in the classroom.
 - C. Animals don't have any feelings in their daily lives.
 - D. Mrs. Black knows very well about different animals.

D

A band(乐队) is playing on the stage now. Many people are watching it. There are five members in the band. They are Jack Berry, Ollie Gray, Harrison Paparatto, Austin Siegel and Evan Tucker. The five teens are making music from their instruments. The guitars in the band are made of boxes. The horn(号) is made of pipes. The keyboard is made of old bottles.

Two years ago, Jack Berry, who was in eighth grade, wanted to make a home-made guitar. He made it from a cereal box, a yardstick and toothpicks. After Jack showed his guitar to his friend Ollie Gray, Ollie had the idea to form(成立) a band using other home-made instruments. “We want to show people it's good to recycle(回收) things than throw them away in the bin.” Jack, 16, told TFK. “You can actually reuse them.”

The teens of the band usually play on the festivals. They also go to the farmer's markets and community fundraisers(募捐会) in Sarasota. They usually play on the street and sing popular songs from the 1960s, including classic Beatles tunes(曲调) and crowd favorite “Wipe Out”. During the breaks, they talk about the tips for how to recycle things to make the city clean. At the same time, Jack's little brother Trent, 11, puts up their posters and helps sell the band's CDs.

The band gives the money from sales to help the people in need. They raise(筹集) more than $2,500 for Heifer International. The group gives farm animals and seeds to the people in poor countries. “It's a good charity(慈善),” Jack says, “By giving one animal to a farm, we can help the farmers there.”

The band, all tenth graders, tries to play a show every week. They play on a Florida radio station. The teens hope to take their shows on the road by travelling in other states. Jack says, “Music is a good way to spread(扩散) a good message to all the people.”

Now, the band is famous in America. It sets a good example(榜样) to recycle things in our daily lives.

26. What can we know from the passage?
