Avery and I are good friends, but once something unpleasant happened when we both tried out for roles in Alice in Wonderland.

Avery really expected to be Alice and I was sure she could get the lead role. However, it 32 that I was picked to be the lead role Alice. What made me sad is that Avery only got the part of the March Hare. "Do you want to practice together with me?" I asked her after that. "Sorry, I'm busy this week," said Avery coldly, without looking at me. "And I will be always busy."

That night at dinner, my parents noticed I was not that 33 about getting the lead role. They 34 what happened and asked me why. "Well, Avery was not picked to be the lead role Alice, but I was. She was unhappy. Maybe she will throw away our friendship"

My father said, "Don't worry about it. I think this is a 35 for you to be an extra-good friend."

"Dad's right," said my mother. "Sometimes when our friends do well, we may have feelings of envy and become green-eyed monsters and don't know how to act. Try giving her a little time, space and understanding, and she will change her mind soon."

Over the next week, I tried my best to give Avery some 36. Then one day, on the way to our practice, I met her. "I just want to say, you're such a great actor when acting as the March Hare." I said to her with a broad smile on my face. She also seemed happy and 37 how she understood the role with excitement. When I asked her to help me with my role, she agreed and smiled, too. She even said sorry to me for acting that way at first. Later, to my surprise, we became 38 to each other.

I came to realize that we sometimes may have a 39 time dealing with envy and disappointment in a friendship. All we need to do is to give our friends a little time, space and understanding. This might be the perfect chance for you to be an extra-good friend.

(二) 阅读下列短文, 根据短文内容, 从短文后个体所给的 A, B, C 和 D 四个选项中, 选择最佳答案。

(B)

As I walked into the primary school, I looked down at my new black shoes. I stood at Mrs. Blackstone's door. Before I tried the great escape, the door opened. "We've been waiting for you!" Mrs. Blackstone, my new fifth grade teacher, said loudly. With a smile my mom walked away and I was left taking center stage in front of a group of students.

Over the next few days, Mrs. Blackstone made it her job to find me a new best friend. During history lessons, when I didn't want to speak in front of the class, she'd not only call on me but have me stand up to address my classmates.

One spring afternoon, Mrs. Blackstone asked me to stay after class. "I'd like to speak with you, Amanda." My mind raced. Had I got a bad grade? Had I hurt anyone's feelings? "Are you enjoying your new school?" She sat comfortably behind her desk. "I want to tell you something, between you and me, not to be shared with anyone else." She continued, "I see something special in you. The way you communicate with others, and the kindness you show — I think you have great potential (潜力) to be something important." I listened carefully to every word. "I have been a teacher for over twenty-five years; I can see it. But you must believe in yourself. That's very important. Remember that and you'll go far," she said.

Her voice was music to my ears that day. I walked out of her office, not staring at my shoes, but looking straight ahead with my head high. My teacher saw something special in me! Years later, her words still remain inside of me and often ring in my ears.

43. The author went to school unwillingly most probably because she _____.
- A. didn't like the school at all
  - B. often got low grades at school
  - C. was treated badly by her classmates
  - D. wasn't used to the new environment
44. How did the writer feel when she was asked to stay after class?
- A. Annoyed
  - B. Nervous
  - C. Tired
  - D. Embarrassed
45. Why did Mrs. Blackstone have a talk with the author?
- A. To tell the author her potential.
  - B. To help the author to realize her mistakes.
  - C. To make the author feel cared and loved.
  - D. To encourage the author to believe in herself.

( C )

What kind of amusing activities will you participate in during your life? Will you be spending your free time doing safe sports with little danger or will you always be one of the first people to try the next popular extreme activity? Scientists have been interested in finding out why some people seem to prefer dangerous activities.

Although there are exceptions (例外), researchers have found that in most cases men are less cautious than women. Men often try to impress women by proving that they are courageous and fearless, and they are more likely to take risks when women are watching them or when they are competing against other men.

Research also shows that as people get older, they usually behave more responsibly and avoid taking unnecessary risks. In addition, when people are in stable (稳定的) relationships, they seem to be less attracted to daring (冒险的) activities.

Some people seem to be more daring than others, but there are many different types of risks and some people take one type of risk, but not another. Psychologists have identified a number of categories of risk. These include financial risks, risks related to health and safety, amusing risks and social risks. Psychologists discover that some people will take risks in one area, but not in another. Just if a person enjoys bungee (蹦极) jumping, it doesn't mean he or she will take chances when investing money or that he will tell a joke to a group of strangers.

Interestingly, research shows that women take more social risks than men. They are more likely to make career changes as they get older and to express unpopular opinions in business meetings.

Yet, at the end of the day, the likelihood of particular people taking a risk depends on their personalities. In general, optimistic people are more likely to take risks because they focus on the possible positive outcomes of their actions. On the other hand, those with opposite personality are much more likely to avoid taking a chance.

46. What can we learn from the 2nd paragraph?

- A. Women are always changing jobs.
- B. Women are good at doing business.
- C. Women are more willing to take risks.
- D. Women are less risky than men.

47. What mainly determine whether people take risks possibly?

- A. The potential consequences.
- B. Their characters.
- C. Their problems of finance.
- D. The focuses of their work.

48. What is the text mainly talking about?

- A. People's sense of taking risks.
- B. Risks at people's different ages.
- C. Different types of people's risks.
- D. Risks between men and women.

(D)

Technologies used for human purposes are now being used to improve pet's well-being. And the pet humanization trend of recent years is shown in technology, with a great increase in need for different kinds of wearable tech devices (设备) from pet parents around the world. Today, it is not unusual to see dogs or cats with something tied (系) to their body to monitor (监控) their activity or track their location.

"People don't know the answer to questions about how much exercise or the amount of food their dog needs and that's where wearable monitoring device comes in," says CEO and co-founder of PitPat, Andrew Nowell. Between 2022 and 2021, this UK developer of a pet tracking device for dogs shipped 39% more of its products. At the same time, the UK pet population increased by 10% to more than 9 million and a new type of pet owner appeared, the so-called Generation Y. They are the majority of customers that buy a wearable tech device, mainly wanting to know how far their pet has gone and what the dog is doing while they are out.

The wearable tech field is mainly made up of small start-up companies. But this may change in the near future. "All the big players are very interested. They will jump into the field in one way or another," said Asaf Dagan, co-founder of the wearable tech device producer PetPace. Market research companies are predicting that the field will be worth between $2.4 billion and $3.5 billion in the coming years, with a yearly increase ranging between 13.5% and 25% by 2025.

Despite the potential (潜力), there are still some challenges that companies will soon have to face. Awareness is one of them. "The function of the GPS tracker is supposed to be known by more pet parents, but there is still work to do to help them know about activity monitors. It is a matter of putting the message across. The value is there and the need is there. It's about providing a connection and creating awareness," commented Dagan.

49. What does paragraph 1 mainly tell us about wearable tech devices?

- A. They help improve human well-being.
- B. They require some changes to serve pets well.
- C. They were invented for human-pet relationships.
- D. They are becoming increasingly popular with pet owners.

50. Why do pet-owning Generation Y buy wearable tech devices?

- A. To keep their pets warm.
- B. To correct their pets' behavior.
- C. To monitor their pets' activity.
- D. To save their pets from getting disease.

51. What does the underlined words "putting the message across" in the 4th paragraph mean?

- A. Guiding people to use GPS trackers properly.
- B. Getting people to know the value of activities monitors.
- C. Making continuous improvement of activities monitors.
- D. Increasing the market share (份额) of GPS trackers.

52. What is the main purpose of the writer?

- A. To prove that wearable tech devices for pets are useful.
- B. To stress how Generation Y get connected with their pets.
- C. To explain how people track and monitor their pets' activities.
- D. To introduce us to the field of wearable tech devices for pets.

八、阅读表达 (共 10 分, 53-55 每题 2 分, 56 题 4 分)

阅读短文内容, 然后回答问题。

Do you like to travel alone? Or do you think it's better to travel with friends? If you're still deciding, please read on. I will explain the advantages of both ways.

One of the great things about traveling alone is that you can decide where you go and what you eat. You'll be surprised at what you discover about yourself without any influence.

Traveling alone really shows you what you're made of and helps you to discover inner strength you didn't know you had. Besides, it also gives you time to think, learn and grow. When your eyes are wide open, you'll get a whole new outlook on the world.

It's easy to think that traveling alone is lonely. Although that may sometimes be true, you're hardly ever alone. When you travel in a one-person team, this can provide a chance for you to enjoy the most interesting part of travel—communicating with the local people.

In fact, traveling to know more about the world is not easy. There's research to be done, flights to be booked and choices to be made. One of the main advantages of traveling with friends is being able to share these things and support each other through the process, even if it's just someone who will wait with your bag when you go to the bathroom.

Just as your mother always says, it's true that traveling with others can give you a sense of safety, especially if you're new to travel. You know that if you get lost or have your wallet stolen, there's someone to hold your hand when you try to explain your situation in a foreign police station. There's no right or wrong way to travel. Whether you travel alone or team up with friends, it is up to you.

53. What can you decide when you travel alone?

54. According to the writer, what is the most interesting part of travelling in a one-person team?

---

55. Why isn't it easy to know more about the world by traveling?

---

56. Do you prefer to travel alone or travel with friends? Why? (List at least two reasons.)
