She knows how to guard(保卫) the family if there is danger. The other elephants follow her. Adult male(公的) elephants leave the herd to live on their own and start families.

Elephants are intelligent animals with long memories. They learn from other elephants and they also learn from life. They usually can live up to 70 years. A matriarch can remember where to find water even in a dry spell. The herd will follow her there. She can also remember the safe place to cross a fast-moving river.

Elephants talk to each other with rumbling sounds. Some rumbling sounds are so deep(低沉的) that people's ears cannot hear them. If there is danger, the rumbling stops. Everyone is on guard. Mothers flap(拍打) their ears to call their babies to them. The adult elephants stand around the baby elephants to keep them safe.

Other animals do not usually attack(袭击) elephants. But a lion might try to attack a baby elephant. If this happens, the elephants make loud sounds and hit(击) the ground with their trunks(象鼻). The matriarch puts herself between the lion and the herd. She flaps her ears out to make herself look even larger. Then she lowers her head and runs towards the lion.

I'm Dave. My mum and I went to the countryside to visit my grandma last weekend. I was always happy to go to my grandma's home, because I could have a good time there.

In the countryside, I had a lot of good friends. On Saturday, we did a lot of interesting things. We played hide-and-seek(捉迷藏), swam and went fishing. We enjoyed ourselves.

But things didn't always go well. On Sunday, my friends and I went to a hill behind the village. Soon, we climbed to the top of the hill. We began to play hide-and-seek happily. In the afternoon, we were so tired that we fell asleep on the grass. Suddenly, Zack shouted. We woke up and ran to him. He showed a red swelling(肿) on his face to us. And then we found a wasp(黄蜂) flying around. At once we knew what happened to Zack—he was stung(蜇) by the wasp. We were worried about him. So we took him to my grandma. She helped him. Luckily, his face got well soon.
