C

When your birthday comes, you may have a party(派对) with your friends. Some of them bring gifts for you. Do you know how to give and get gifts in other countries?

People in different(不同的) countries have different gift-giving customs(风俗). When you know them, you can know what to do.

You should know the right time to give a gift. Gifts are not only for birthdays or holidays. If you visit people in Russia(俄罗斯), you must bring gifts with you. But in Canada no one wants a gift.

The thing that you give is also important(重要的). When you give flowers to an English man, don't give 13 flowers.

There are customs for getting gifts, too.

In China, when we get gifts, we always thank them and we don't open them. But in many other countries, it is common(共同的, 常见的) to open a gift when you get it. Your friend can see if(是否) you like it. Later, you can thank your friend with a thank-you card(卡).

In Japan(日本), you should always take a gift with two hands. In India(印度), one hand is OK, but it should always be your right hand. One custom is common all over the world. That's saying thank you.

28. In many countries, people open their gifts in front of their friends, so their friends can _____.

- A. say thanks to them
- B. make thank-you cards
- C. know what the gifts are
- D. know they like them or they don't like them

29. What can we know from the passage(文章)?
- A. We should use our left hands to get gifts in India.
 - B. We should give gifts to people when we visit them in Russia.
 - C. We should use one hand to take a gift from a friend in Japan.
 - D. We should bring people some gifts in Canada when we visit them.
30. Which is the best title(题目) of the passage?
- A. People around the World
 - B. Countries around the World
 - C. Gift Customs around the World
 - D. Birthday Party Customs around the World

D

Is Reading Important(重要的)?

Do you like reading books? Do you often read when you have time? Do you have many books? What is your favourite book? Do you like reading books in English? Maybe your answers are not the same.

Some students think they have classes from Monday to Friday every week and they read books at school. After school, they have some homework to do so they don't have time to read other books.

Some students think they can read interesting books in Chinese, but they can't read books in English because they are not good at English.

Some studies show that some people know reading is important in their own languages because it can be educational(教育的), open up a new world and enrich(使丰富) their life. But for learning a foreign(外国的) language, reading in that language is also beneficial. It can help you learn language faster.

Reading is an essential(基本的) skill for language learners. When your reading skills improve(提升), your listening, speaking and writing skills improve, too. Do you want to improve your English? Learn to love reading in English.

Reading is important. The good readers often can do things well. When you have time, please read some books.

31. Some students have no much time to read books after school because _____.
- A. they have a lot of classes
 - B. they must do some sports
 - C. they must do some housework
 - D. they have to do homework

32. The word "beneficial" in Paragraph 4 probably(可能)means(意味着)"_____".
- A. fun B. good C. interesting D. boring
33. The writer(作者)wants to _____.
- A. give some books to children B. tell students to do some reading
- C. make students love English class D. let students study a foreign language
