“Are you listening, Chris?” Mrs. Green asks.

Chris smiles and shakes his head. 17 is so much fun. He doesn't often listen or try hard in class. He wants to be heard rather than (胜过) listen.

“Listen, and you should learn something” Mrs. Green tries to make him listen to her carefully every day, but Chris never 18 talking in class.

That evening, Chris starts to feel a bit sick. By bedtime his throat (喉咙) feels really bad.

The next 19, when he opens his mouth to say, "Good morning, mum." nothing comes out. Poor Chris loses his voice (嗓音).

Mrs. Green says "Hello" to him at school, and he just nods (点头). When his friends start to ask him what TV shows he watches, he can't 20 anything. By the time the bell rings for class, almost everyone is looking at him as if he's got a third eye.

“Why isn't Chris talking? He never stops talking.” One of Chris's classmates says worriedly.

Everyone starts talking at once. They are excited, worried and surprised.

Chris sits in class, bored because he can't talk to his classmates. He only watches them talk to each other, but he can't even do that. He decides (决定) to listen to his 21 carefully and learn something.

You know what? It isn't that bad. He can really do his homework and finish it 22 that night. It gives him more TV and game time.

The next day, his voice is coming back, but he stays quiet again. The third day, he can talk fine, but he doesn't talk. He listens carefully and puts up his hand to answer Mrs. Green's questions.

What a difference that one day makes!

In Canada and the United States, people enjoy entertaining (请客) at home. They often invite (邀请) friends over for a meal, a party, or just for coffee and conversation (谈话). Here are the kinds of things people say when they invite someone to their home: "Would you like to come over for dinner this Saturday?" "Hey, we're having a party on Friday. Can you come?"

To reply (回应) to an invitation, either say "thank you" and accept (接受), or say "you are sorry" and give an excuse. "Thanks, I'd love to. What time would you like me to come?" or "Oh, sorry, I have tickets for a movie."

Sometimes, however, people use expressions that sound like invitations but which are not real invitations. For example, "Please come over for a drink sometime," "Why not get together for a party sometime?" "Why don't you come over and see us sometime soon?"

They are really just polite (礼貌的) ways of ending a conversation. They are not real invitations because they don't mention (提到) a specific time or date. They just show that the person is trying to be friendly. To reply to expressions like these, people just say “Sure, that would be great!” or “OK, yes, thanks.”

So next time when you hear what sounds like an invitation, listen carefully, is it a real invitation or is the person just being friendly?

33. Why do Canadians and Americans often invite friends for meals at home?

- A. Because they are good at cooking.
- B. Because they can save more time.
- C. Because they like entertaining at home.

34. Which of the following is a real invitation?

- A. Why not get together for a party sometime?
- B. We're having a party on Friday. Can you come?
- C. Why don't you come over and see us sometime soon?

35. Paragraphs 3&4 mainly talk about _____.

- A. how to start conversations
- B. how to tell real invitations
- C. how to reply real invitations

Is it good or bad shopping on the Internet?

Now people can buy things in many different ways, such as shopping on the Internet. It's the most popular way of shopping. Everyone has their own ideas about shopping on the Internet. I think online shopping has many advantages (优势).

It's really easy to buy almost all the things. You don't have to go out. And you don't have to wait for a long time. It's very convenient (方便的) and you can buy things at any time at home. The shops on the Internet are open for 24 hours every day. It can help you save time. This is especially convenient to the old, the sick and the busy people who cannot go to the shops in person.

But it also has many disadvantages. For example, when you want to buy something, you can't see the real things or try them on until you pay for them and receive them by post later. You can only see the goods' (商品) pictures and you don't know if they are good enough to suit you. If you are not happy with the things you bought, it's very difficult to return them. And the quality (质量) of some goods may be bad sometimes. And for some people, shopping in a shop or supermarket is interesting, while it's boring to shop on the Internet because you can't have fun shopping with your friends.

Although shopping on the Internet isn't good enough, I like this way best.

- 46. What is the most popular way of shopping?
- 47. How long are the shops on the Internet open every day?
- 48. Why do some people think it's boring to shop on the Internet?
- 49. Do you like shopping on the Internet? Why or why not?
